HONOLULU, HAWAIIAN ISLANDS, DECEMBER 3, 1863.

Advertiser.

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY HENRY M. WHITNEY.

THE PACIFIC Commercial Advertiser. Foreign Miscellany.

The signs of the breaking up of the Confederacy are multiplying. Even the Richmond brokers refuse to exchange gold for Confederate money.

The mammoth skeleton of the Zengolodon in the Chicago Museum, is said to be the largest in the world.

Charles Forbes, of Portland, a year ago grafted a pear scion into a mountain ash, and the ash has borne an abundance of pears this season.

Mortality in New York.—The deaths in New York reached the almost incredible number of nine hundred and seventy per week.

The claims for damages done by the rioters in New York city, foot up nearly $1,100,000. The amount claimed by colored persons is $17,467.

Albert G. Brown, of Mississippi, has taken the oath of allegiance to the Federal government. He was formerly Governor of the State and a noted secessionist.

A steam carriage is on exhibition at Lowell, Mass., that will run from thirty to forty miles an hour on a common road. It will travel slow or fast, up hill and down, backward and forward.

Mosquitoes.—A lady writes to the Rural New Yorker saying that the annoyance of mosquitoes will be effectually prevented by a very simple process. Close the room and burn a teaspoonful of brown sugar on some live coals, or even shavings, and the insects become paralyzed at once.

A recent sale of negroes in Montgomery County, Maryland, illustrates the comparative worthlessness of slave property in that State. Seven likely, full grown young negroes brought in all $126—an average of only $18 a head. Before the war, the same negroes were worth on an average $1,800 a piece.

A New Yorker gives as an instance of the vigilance of the Central Park police, the following statement: One of them stopped a young lady the other day and insisted that the flowers in her bonnet had been plucked in the Park. He made quite a critical examination of them, to the great indignation of the lady, and finally came to the conclusion that they were artificial.

Sir Charles Lyell supposes that the Delta deposit of the Mississippi may have required 100,000 years. The eminent French Geologist, M. Elie De Beaumont, fixes the period necessary at 1,300 years! A writer in the July number of the Edinburgh Review, taking Prof. Dana's data, makes the period between five and six thousand years.

No CARDS.—A young lady having learned that the man to whom she was engaged to be married was addicted to card playing, refused to marry him until he had pledged himself to abandon the habit. When the marriage was announced in the papers, in order that all the acquaintances might know the promising circumstances under which they started, they added to the announcement—No cards. It has since become an institution.

The greatest capture of men mentioned in modern history was made by Bonaparte at Angaitza, where he took 20,000 men. Gen. Grant, it is now reported, took nearly 31,000 at Vicksburg. Napoleon's spoil at Austerlitz was 150 pieces of artillery; Gen. Grant's at Vicksburg is stated to be 238—embracing nine siege guns and 209 pieces of artillery.

DICTIONARIES IN ENGLAND.—There are at the room of the agent for Webster's Dictionaries, at Mason's Hall, 274 Washington street, Boston, specimen copies of six different editions of Webster's Dictionary, published in England, and also specimens of "Noah Webster's British and American Spelling Book," and "The Illustrated Webster's Dictionary," also from the English press. No person can examine these volumes without realizing how very great a popularity the name of Noah Webster has attained in Great Britain.

General Shackelford, who captured Morgan, is a Kentuckian, an eminent lawyer, and an enthusiastic Union man. He entered the war with a full conscience in the fight, and in his policy was guided by the rebel officers at Fort Wagner, of selling at auction all negro soldiers captured, is carried out, retaliation is inevitable. Section 3, paragraph 58, of the instructions for the government of the armies of the United States in the field, issued April 24, provides that the retaliation for such a course shall be death on rebel prisoners in our hands.

FOOTLOCK PAPER.—In Charles the First's time all English paper bore in water marks the Royal arms. The Parliament under Cromwell made jests of this law in every conceivable manner; and, among other indignities to the memory of King Charles, it was ordered that the royal arms be removed from the paper, and the "fools cap and bells" be substituted. These in their turn, were also removed when the Rump Parliament was prorogued; but paper of the kind of the Parliament journal still bears the name of "foolscap."

OCEAN STEAMSHIPS.—The Panama Star and Herald, talking of Vanderbilt's line between New York and Aspinwall, says: "The Ocean Queen, on her last trip, had three hundred kegs of butter on freight stored in the passengers' berths, while those persons holding tickets for passage had to sleep on deck. The North Star, on her last trip, had 300 packages of butter also stored in passengers' berths, but the kegs breaking away, endangering the lives of stowage passengers, Capt. Jones threw them overboard, and now claims from the underwriters. One hundred cases of ordnance stores were also stowed under the berths, 17 cases of which consisting of bombs, fixed ammunition, etc., were thrown overboard."

The Paris correspondent of the Times, says the Illustration of Paris, in its last number, contains the following well merited and just eulogium on the music and the performers of Dr. McCintock's Church, the American Chapel of the Rue de Berry: "Last Sunday we heard at the American Chapel a Te Deum full of soul and inspiration, which is the production of an American, Dr. J. W. Crane. Ladies of the best New York society sang the music of their compatriot, and sang it in a style for which we were little prepared. The soloists were Mrs. Riggs and her brother, M. Van Zandt, of whom the ancestors were among the founders of New York. There is no more charming and sympathetic voice than Mrs. Riggs; no one could sing with more science, soul and fervor."

VICKSBURG BEER.—A Confederate officer who is writing a detailed account of what took place inside Port Hudson during its beleaguering, says that when on the 29th of June, the last quarter ration of beef had been given out to the troops, on the 1st of July, at the request of many officers, a wounded male was killed and cut up for experimental eating. All those who partook of it spoke highly of the dish. The flesh of mules the writer describes as being of a darker color than beef, of a finer grain, quite tender and juicy, and as having a flavor something between that of beef and venison. There was an immediate demand for this kind of food, and the number of mules killed by the commissariat daily increased. Some horses were also slaughtered, and their flesh was found to be very good eating, but not equal to mule.
